Introduction

Farshad Hoseini

Stoning is one of the cruelest forms of punishment in history. It is one of the vilest links in the chain of murders committed by states that still burdens humanity today. The Islamic Republic of Iran is the only political regime in the world that has been constantly and systematically issuing and executing stoning sentences during the 31 years of its existence. Stoning in Iran is a political tool in the hands of an Islamic regime to oppress the society as a whole in one of the most savage ways.

The overwhelming majority of the victims of stoning are women. Stoning in Iran is therefore a tool, among many such religious, oppressive tools, for keeping women in their place.

The nightmare of Sakineh Mohammadi Ashtiani being sentenced to death by stoning, her son's appeal to the world to save his mother's life, and the ensuing public outcry have all, indeed, opened a window to this most heinous crime of the regime. In the light of Sakineh's case, the world should become aware of what the many other known cases of death by stoning or those awaiting this brutal fate.

Today Sakineh's voice has reached the world, but it must, and it can, shake the world! All civilized people around the world should stand up to such barbarity, and together we should declare that stoning has no place in our midst. Sakineh must be the last such case not only in Iran but around the world. And all of those who have ordered and executed such a heinous crime must be brought to justice before international tribunals.

The International Committee against Stoning has raised its voice for years now against any stoning sentences handed down anywhere in the world calling out to people to protest. During these years it has fought for a dozen specific cases like that of Sakineh's, won a few with the help of the people of the world saving the victims from the most horrific death. Meanwhile, however, there have been many more men and women who have been killed in this way or who are awaiting this horrific sentence.

So let us take a look at the list of the victims of stoning and resolve, here and now, that this remnant of savagery must be relegated to the dustbins of history.

The chronological list provided here is of known stoning sentences issued and executed in Iran during March, 1980 to July 2010. It should be pointed out that obtaining a true and complete list of the victims is extremely difficult, if not totally impossible, due to the regime's systematic censorship of such news. We have collected the information despite the censorship in the process of our efforts to save those condemned to death by stoning, as well as from media reports, human rights organisations, etc. Although it is by no means complete, the reader should be mindful of the fact that only one item on the list should suffice to discredit a state that rules by means of such crimes in its entirety. This gory track record should be regarded as a historical document as well as indictment against the criminals responsible for it. In short, it should be regarded as a wake-up call to the people worldwide to unite and rise up against stoning as sheer savagery that has no place in the modern world.

The list will be updated regularly. We therefore request all the families and individuals in possession of further information on victims of stoning to help us in fulfilling this momentous task.

Facts and Figures on Stoning in Iran

By Farshad Hoseini

In 1983, the contemporary Islamic Penal Code was ratified by Iran's parliament.

But stoning had been practiced in Iran since 1980. Based on the sources of our report*, at least 10 persons were stoned to death in Iran before stoning became a part of the law as punishment for adultery.

In 2002, Iran's judiciary indicated that stoning would no longer be practiced in Iran.

But since 2003, eight people have been stoned to death, and 47 people have either been sentenced to death by stoning or the courts have upheld their stoning sentences.

In 2008, Iran's judiciary decided to scrap the punishment of stoning in draft legislation submitted to parliament for approval.

But since then, 5 people were stoned in 2008 and 2009 and 15 people have been handed stoning execution sentences.

As of June 2009, Iran's parliament has been in the process of reviewing and revising the Islamic penal code to omit stoning as a form of punishment.

But since then, 1 man was stoned to death in 2009 and 11 people have sentenced to death by stoning.

During the presidency of Mohammad Khatami (1997-2005), the so called "reformist" president of Islamic Republic of Iran...

...there were at least 28 people stoned to death and 36 people sentenced to death by stoning.

During presidency of Ahmadinejad (2005-2010)...

...there were 8 people stoned to death and 31 people sentenced to death by stoning.

During Khomeini's period of rule (1980-1989)...

... at least 76 people were stoned to death.

Note: These are only the cases for which documented evidence exists; it is certain that the actual numbers are higher.

Statistical summary of stoning sentences in Iran The number of people stoned to death during 1980 – 2010

The total number of women and men who have been stoned is more than 150. We have collected a list of 136. It is important to note though that Amnesty International has reported that until 1989 the total number of people who have been stoned to death in Iran was 76. If we add to this the 74 others who were have gathered information on from 1989 until 2010, the total number is therefore 150.

The real numbers are higher. However, this information is not available for the following reasons:

- 1- Iranian authorities have not released any official figures of stonings.
- 2 – A large number of stonings have been carried out secretly.
- 3- Human rights organisations in most cases have been forced to record the numbers of stonings published in pro-government newspapers, given the absence of official statistics.
- 4-The news of all stonings that have taken place have not be published in newspapers, and sometimes they have been prohibited from publishing this news.
- 5- It is most difficult to collect information about those stoned to death in small cities and villages.
- 6- There is very little information in the early years after the establishment of the Islamic Republic of Iran.

What is stoning and who is stoned?

In stoning ('Rajm' in Arabic), the accused is made to wear a white sheet and buried in a hole in the ground, males up to their waist and females up to their chest, and then tortured to death by having stones thrown at them.

The stones should not be so big that they kill the victim quickly, but not too small either. The aim is to kill the person gradually with the utmost pain.

During stoning, if the man or woman manages to escape from the hole, they are free to go.

The Islamic Republic of Iran bases its system of justice on Islamic law which demands that having a sexual relationship outside of marriage carries this death sentence.

Farshad Hosseini, who is a member of the International Committees against Stoning and Execution, has researched this subject. According to his statistics, in the last 31 years a minimum of 150 people have been stoned by the Islamic Republic of Iran. Today, at least 22 prisoners are waiting to be stoned. The majority of prisoners condemned to stoning are women. Public opinion in Iran is deeply against these crimes. That is why, in recent years, during stoning or public executions, the government tightens up security on the scene. Those who stone are mainly security forces in civilian clothes.

Today, these barbaric acts are passed as law and carried out in countries under Islamic governments, specifically the Islamic Republic of Iran, Sudan, Somalia, Nigeria, Saudi Arabia, the United Arab Emirates and in Afghanistan by the Taliban. For instance, see Article 83 of the Penal Code of the Islamic Republic of Iran.

Stoning clearly expresses the inhumane nature of the political Islamic movement, its parties and government.

Join us to stop this barbaric act. Join us to stop stoning.
